

Year 5 Reading Programmes of Study

Purpose of Study:

English has a pre-eminent place in education and in society. A high-quality education in English will teach pupils to speak and write fluently so that they can communicate their ideas and emotions to others, and through their reading and listening, others can communicate with them. Through reading in particular, pupils have a chance to develop culturally, emotionally, intellectually, socially and spiritually. Literature, especially, plays a key role in such development. Reading also enables pupils both to acquire knowledge and to build on what they already know. All the skills of language are essential to participating fully as a member of society; pupils who do not learn to speak, read and write fluently and confidently are effectively disenfranchised.

Subject Content:

By the beginning of year 5, pupils should be able to read aloud a wider range of poetry and books written at an age-appropriate interest level with accuracy and at a reasonable speaking pace. They should be able to read most words effortlessly and to work out how to pronounce unfamiliar written words with increasing automaticity. If the pronunciation sounds unfamiliar, they should ask for help in determining both the meaning of the word and how to pronounce it correctly. They should be able to prepare readings, with appropriate intonation to show their understanding, and should be able to summarise and present a familiar story in their own words. They should be reading widely and frequently, outside as well as in school, for pleasure and information. They should be able to read silently, with good understanding, inferring the meanings of unfamiliar words, and then discuss what they have read.

During years 5 and 6, teachers should continue to emphasise pupils' enjoyment and understanding of language, especially vocabulary, to support their reading and writing. Pupils' knowledge of language, gained from stories, plays, poetry, non-fiction and textbooks, will support their increasing fluency as readers, their facility as writers, and their comprehension. It is essential that pupils whose decoding skills are poor are taught through a rigorous and systematic phonics programme so that they catch up rapidly with their peers in terms of their decoding and spelling. However, as far as possible, these pupils should follow the upper key stage 2 programme of study in terms of listening to books and other writing that they have not come across before, hearing and learning new vocabulary and grammatical structures, and having a chance to talk about all of these.

Sequential Learning:	Previous end point knowledge the pupils must remember to ensure learning stays in the long term memory. Please review previous learning to check pupils' understanding, identify and correct misunderstandings. This will ensure pupils embed key concepts in their long-term memory and apply them fluently. Revisiting previous learning will allow pupils to transfer key knowledge to long-term memory.
Current Knowledge & Skills	The new knowledge and skills must allow pupils to transfer key knowledge to long-term memory. New knowledge and skills will build on what has been taught before and pupils will work towards the clearly defined end points.
End Point of Unit	NFER Assessment is used 3 times a year to check pupils' understanding and to help pupils embed and use knowledge fluently and develop their understanding

Year 5 READING

Over the course of the year, the children will develop the same skills with growing sophistication as applied to a broad range of texts of increasing complexity of vocabulary and themes. They will increase familiarity with a wide range of books, reading for a range of different purposes - myths, legends, traditional stories from a range of cultures and traditions, modern fiction, fiction from our literary heritage; a range of forms of poetry, plays, a variety of purposes of nonfiction.

FLUENCY, WORD READING AND VOCABULARY

At this stage, there should be no need for further direct teaching of word reading skills for almost all pupils. If pupils are struggling or failing in this, the reasons for this should be investigated. It is imperative that pupils are taught to read during their last two years at primary school if they enter year 5 not being able to do so.

It is essential that pupils whose decoding skills are poor are taught through a rigorous and systematic phonics programme so that they catch up rapidly with their peers in terms of their decoding and spelling. However, as far as possible, these pupils should follow the upper key stage 2 programme of study in terms of listening to books and other writing that they have not come across before, hearing and learning new vocabulary and grammatical structures, and having a chance to talk about all of these.

Accurate reading of individual words, which might be key to the meaning of a sentence or paragraph, improves comprehension.

When teachers are reading with or to pupils, attention should be paid to new vocabulary – both a word’s meaning(s) and its correct pronunciation.

Pupils will need to be exposed to new vocabulary 8-12 times (listening and reading) before they will be able to use it independently.

COMPREHENSION

The knowledge and skills that pupils need in order to comprehend are very similar at different ages. Pupils should continue to apply what they have already learnt to more complex writing.

Good comprehension draws from linguistic knowledge (in particular of vocabulary and grammar) and on knowledge of the world. Comprehension skills develop through pupils' experience of high-quality discussion with the teacher, as well as from reading and discussing a range of stories, poems and non-fiction. All pupils must be encouraged to read widely across both fiction and non-fiction to develop their knowledge of themselves and the world in which they live, to establish an appreciation and love of reading, and to gain knowledge across the curriculum. Reading widely and often increases pupils' vocabulary because they encounter words they would rarely hear or use in everyday speech. Reading also feeds pupils' imagination and opens up a treasure-house of wonder and joy for curious young minds.

The skills of information retrieval that are taught should be applied, for example, in reading history, geography and science textbooks, and in contexts where pupils are genuinely motivated to find out information, for example, reading information leaflets before a gallery or museum visit or reading a theatre programme or review.

Pupils will be taught to read as a reader, identifying the audience and purpose of the text and what the text is trying to do to them as a reader before using the strategies to build up to inference.

Text selection is critical and this is the key progression in reading throughout KS2. The complexity of the text increases the level of challenge.

Choose texts carefully to build up complexity throughout the year (complexity of language, complexity of sentence structure, non-linear time sequences and complexity of narrative structure, variety of audience and variety of purpose, language which is old fashioned or dialect). The teaching text should be above their instructional level.

Consider:

- Opportunities - does the text provide opportunities to apply the I will know? Are there complimentary extracts to explore this in a different context?
- Vocabulary - how suitable is the vocabulary? Is it challenging enough?
- Sentence structure - how complex is this? Is there variety? Is it challenging enough?
- Background knowledge - what background knowledge will pupils need to understand the text?
- Text structure - how complex is this? What organisational features support understanding? What themes and conventions are there? Are there complimentary extracts to explore this in a different context?
- Enjoyment - will this text be enjoyable and relevant for the children?

End Point of Unit

Assessment of learning at end point

Text purpose:

I will know how to identify the intended audience and purpose of a text

- Writers create texts to create a particular effect on the reader - identify the intended audience and purpose through the choices made by the writer
- Bring prior knowledge as reader to help understand the text: presentational devices, language choice, structures
- Identify what the text does to me as a reader

- I will know how to retrieve information from a text
- I will know how to define the meaning of vocabulary in a text
- I will know how to define the impact of vocabulary on the

Comprehension strategies: Complexity through text analysis

I will know how to retrieve information from a text

- Retrieve from a range of fiction, non fiction and poetry texts and extracts
- Retrieve, record and present information from within and across the text
- Identify the key words
- Use organisational features such as index, subheadings and diagrams to identify the section of the text to find the information
- Skim the text to get the gist to find the section to read more closely
- Scan methodically for key words
- Combine information from more than one source

I will know how to define the meaning of vocabulary in a text

I will know how to define the impact of vocabulary choices on the reader

- Meaning of words in context - with precision of definition in that particular context and possible substitutions
- Synonyms and antonyms
- Etymology of words - explicitly breaking down the word part
- Clues from the text - how we can work out an unfamiliar word using the words around it in context
- Categorising words - recognising links between words and gradations (eg same meaning but nuanced - eg snicker and laugh)
- Drawing upon prior knowledge to help explain the meaning of the word and other contexts it may be used in
- Precision of word choice and connotations - meaning is enhanced by the specific words and phrases
- Discuss and evaluate how authors use language to impact on the reader
- Discuss and evaluate choices of figurative language - similes, metaphors, personification
- Providing reasons and justifications for views (PEEL)
- Precise description - or deliberately vague description for purpose

I will know how to infer meaning from a text

I will know how to explain and justify my inferences

NB inference is less a skill you can teach (although you need to explicitly model the processes) and more about being aware of whether or not you are understanding what you have read, connect ideas together and to have a wide vocabulary and general knowledge

- Cohesive devices (eg pronouns) to infer simple information (eg who 'she' is)
- Build background knowledge - read and explore a wide range of the context
- Combine what you have read with what you know (own prior knowledge of the world and also knowledge of texts and how they work) to fill in the gaps
- Inferring characters' feelings, thoughts and motives from their actions and (viewpoint/relationship/mood) from clues in the text
- Identify and explain the writer's viewpoint and how this affects the reader's response eg how a character is portrayed, including use of irony (eg sarcasm, insincerity and mockery)
- Use evidence in the text to back up inferences
- Provide reasons and justifications for views (PEEL)

- I will know how to explain and justify my inferences
- I will know how texts work cohesively as a whole

Text Complexity: NFER

- Winter Reading Race (Article)
- Akimbo Elephant (Narrative)
- What's for Lunch (Information Text)

Vocabulary: metaphor, simile, personification, onomatopoeia, alliteration, imagery, style, effect

- Predict what might happen in the text based upon details stated and implied

I will know how texts work cohesively as a whole

- Retell the text orally
- Identify the main ideas from a paragraph or section and from more than one paragraph and summarise these (including key themes and ideas behind the text)
- Identify how language, structure and presentation contribute to meaning
- Distinguish between statements of fact and opinion
- Identify and discuss themes in texts (such as loss or heroism) in and across a wide range of writing
- Identify and discuss conventions in texts (such as the use of the first person in writing diaries and autobiographies) in and across a wide range of writing
- Make comparisons between characters, within and across books
- Compare different accounts of the same event and discuss viewpoints (both of authors and of fictional characters), within a text and across more than one text
- Use technical and other terms needed for discussing what they hear and read

READING INTO WRITING

There are inherent links between reading and writing. Through the reading of authentic texts, pupils explore the choices writers make and the impact of those choices on themselves as a reader. A broad diet of reading supports effective writing. Meaningful opportunities to discuss as a reader support the pupils to make similar choices as a writer, deliberately and with their intended audience and purpose in mind. Pupils need to be exposed to and to have the opportunity to explore a range of texts and extracts to experience how the particular choices made can look differently in different contexts and to create a toolkit to draw upon in their own writing. Teachers will link the reading into the writing learning.

How they will show and apply their new knowledge & skills

End Point of Unit

Assessment of learning at end point

I will know how writers make deliberate choices to impact the reader:

Text as a whole

- Adapted for intended audience and purpose - including a combination of purposes at the same time
- Grammar and vocabulary - understanding how choices can change and enhance meaning

I will know how writers make deliberate choices to impact the reader:

Text organisation:

- range of devices to build cohesion within a paragraph (eg, then, after that, this, firstly)
- link ideas across paragraphs using adverbials of time (eg: later), place (eg: nearby) and number (eg: secondly) or tense choices (eg: he had seen her before)
- organisational and presentational devices to structure text and to guide the reader (eg headings, bullet points, underlining)
- précis longer passages to summarise ideas concisely condense information into a shorter version, keeping main points and order)

I will know how writers make deliberate choices to impact the reader:

Grammar and punctuation:

- perfect form of verbs to mark relationships of time and cause

See Writing Programmes of Study End Points

- modal verbs or adverbs to indicate degrees of possibility
- relative clauses beginning with who, which, where, when, whose, that or with an implied (i.e. omitted) relative pronoun
- commas to clarify meaning or avoid ambiguity in writing
- brackets, dashes or commas to indicate parenthesis

I will know how writers make deliberate choices to impact the reader:

Narrative:

- create atmosphere
- convey character through dialogue (through what the character says and how they say it)
- dialogue to advance the action
- avoid cliché and overwriting

READING FOR PLEASURE/BREADTH & DEPTH OF OPPORTUNITY

Even though pupils can now read independently, reading aloud to them should include whole books so that they meet books and authors that they might not choose to read themselves. Teachers should continue to emphasise pupils' enjoyment and understanding of language, especially vocabulary, to support their reading and writing.

Pupils should be reading widely and frequently, outside as well as in school, for pleasure and information.

Reading, re-reading, and rehearsing poems and plays for presentation and performance give pupils opportunities to discuss language, including vocabulary, extending their interest in the meaning and origin of words. Pupils should be encouraged to use drama approaches to understand how to perform plays and poems to support their understanding of the meaning. These activities also provide them with an incentive to find out what expression is required, so feeding into comprehension.

Reading for pleasure

- Select books (exercising choice) and give reasons for choice
- Maintain positive attitudes to reading
- Read silently
- Recommend books I have read, giving reasons
- Participate in discussions about books (read to me and ones I have read myself), building on ideas and challenging views courteously
- Explain and discuss understanding of what you have read through formal presentations, discussions and debates, maintaining a focus on the topic and using notes where necessary provide reasoned justifications for their views.
- Participate in discussions about books (read to me and ones I have read myself), with explanations and asking questions, taking turns and listening to what others say
- Discuss words and phrases that capture the reader's interest and imagination
- Use language confidently to participate in drama, formal presentations and debate

Breadth and depth of opportunity:

- To read texts that are structured in different ways and for a range of purposes:
 - to entertain (eg narrative descriptions, poetry, characters/settings)
 - to inform (eg report, recount, biography, newspaper article, essay)
 - to persuade (eg advertising, letter, speech, campaign)
 - to discuss (eg balanced argument, newspaper article, review)

- Read an increasingly wide range of fiction, including fairy stories, myths and legends, traditional stories, modern fiction, fiction from our literary heritage, and books from other cultures and traditions
- Read an increasingly wide range of plays, non-fiction and reference books or textbooks

Poetry:

- Prepare poems and play scripts to read aloud and to perform, showing understanding through intonation, tone, volume and action which support the meaning including learning a range of poems by heart
- To read (and discuss) a range of poetry (range of forms and opportunities ieie narrative poems, different dialects, alliteration and assonance, comic verse, nonsense verse, figurative and poetic language: similes, metaphors, personification, onomatopoeia, alliteration, assonance)
